KANN Partners to document the development of Zeta Senior Activities Center in Baltimore - from groundbreaking to ribbon-cutting

Baltimore, MD (June 9, 2008) - After years in the planning stages, KANN Partners celebrated the next phase for their design of the new Zeta Senior Activities Center at the Groundbreaking Celebration Thursday, June 5, 2008.

Under blue skies and the warm late-spring sun, leaders of the Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Inc, Alpha Zeta Chapter, and Myrtle Tyler Faithful Fund, Inc. joined Baltimore City and State of Maryland leaders, including Mayor Sheila Dixon, City Council President Stephanie Rawlings-Blake, Comptroller Joan Pratt, State's Attorney Patricia Jessamy, Councilwoman Sharon Middleton, and State Delegate Barbara Robinson, to officially mark the start of construction of the Zeta Senior Activities Center in Park Heights, Baltimore, Maryland. The Center will be an anchor of activity and support for the seniors and greater community of Park Heights.

"We knew this was a project we wanted to be involved in because it spoke to our beliefs in strong community and the importance of space in supporting community," stated Donald Kann, Principal of KANN Partners, the Center's architect. "The mission of this project is clearly embodied by the people who have worked tirelessly to ensure it was made possible. Their shared vision of the Center has already brought more heart and hope to the community.”

KANN Partners will be following the construction of this building and photo-documenting each phase through its website, www.kannpartners.com. The construction of a building is an important stage to any architect, but it is equally important to the community. As architects and planners, KANN Partners looks ahead to what can be, and for this project, KANN will be sharing the journey from groundbreaking to ribbon-cutting.
